

Command Philosophy

Do The Right Thing -- Do The Thing Right -- Nightowls Don't Quit

Do The Right Thing

We are the men and women of VMUT-2, and we must maintain high standards of duty, integrity, character, and accountability. Be proud of making smart and ethical choices on and off-duty. Being good at your day job is only half of the battle. Work towards moral fitness, just like physical fitness. Exercise both every day. Character and personal discipline form the foundation of trust. Nightowls who take pride in doing the right thing and making disciplined decisions can trust each other.

Do The Thing Right

Whatever you are doing, strive to do it correctly. First time, every time. No cutting corners, no skipping steps. Doing small tasks correctly forms good habits for when the difficult tasks come along. Whether performing aerial reconnaissance or fixing trucks, doing the task correctly, individually and collectively, leads to operational excellence.

Seek to find more effective ways to do business within the guidelines of approved procedures, manuals, and orders. If you find a safer and more effective process, speak up so we can decide together how to fix it.

Nightowls Don't Quit

Falling short does not equal failure. It means you are trying hard. Keep trying hard. Even when we try to do the right thing, and do the thing right, falling short may happen. Keep your head up and Never Quit Trying!

Michael R. Donlin
Lieutenant Colonel, United States Marine Corps
Commanding Officer, VMUT-2